

There are over 50 individuals in Wyoming who have been certified through the Wyoming Agriculture and Natural Resource Mediation Program as mediators. They are located state-wide and they represent a variety of backgrounds. Most of the mediators have experience in agriculture but some are full-time mediation professionals, government administrators, human resource specialists and educators.

To become a certified mediator, participants attend a 30-hour initial training and have to complete 8 hours of recertification every two years.

To request a list of mediators or learn more about becoming certified, contact the mediation coordinator.